

THE KITTENS MEOW

One step closer to the Truth

Issue #1

---

GNOMES, REAL CITIZENS OR JUST A FABRICATION?

A gnome Photographed at a planter. They seem to flock to these structures regularly. (Photo: Brook Johnson)

Gnomes. Just another peoples of the Alliance, one would say, no? Yet, remarkably, we have discovered evidence that might actually prove that there is more to them than meets the eye- and that we may have been fooled all along.

Let me ask you this, dear Reader: Have you ever seen a Gnome child? No, no you have not, because they simply do not exist. We took to the streets to investigate, since as of recently, a highly suspicious absence of Gnomes within the City has been noticed. The Fabled Gnome planter, completely empty. Barely a Gnome to spot in the streets. We found two gnomes in the alleys of the mage quarter, inquired. What we learned was shocking. The Gnomes tried to brainwash us to make us believe that gnomes ever existed to begin with! When we proved resilient to their brainwashing, they admitted that the Gnome planter was taking "a vacation", very likely a cover story to keep their true intentions secret. At the question about Sand Gnomes, they abruptly shut down the interview.

But why, you may ask, is that? Isn't this entire situation highly suspicious? Well yes, dear Reader, you are right, and here is some more food for thought on the mystery surrounding the fabled Gnome:

- Gnomeregan, their fabled city, was invaded by Troggs. Troggs, as is widely known, are easy to defeat, and with the mechanical wonders the gnomes supposedly supply us with, should be easy to overcome.
- Gnomeregan has been uninhabited for Years now- While the Gnomes nest into Ironforge.
- The appearance of Mechagnomes is clear proof that they intend to turn us all into robot servants!

With this, I conclude this Article of profound investigative Journalism, and wish you to stay safe, dear Reader.

Signed, Head Writer of the Kittens Meow,
Brook D. Johnson

---

Advertisement

LOOKING FOR WORKERS!

Allied Sanitation Services (A.S.S.) is looking for qualified (living), sentient (optional) Workers to fill various roles, such as mining, security, plumbing, brickworking and more!

Warning. Allied Sanitation Services is a subsidiary of Rustfume Excavation & Co. We operate within the Undermine workers code, and are not responsible for injuries, financial losses or any other impairments occurring on contract.

Contact:

A.S.S. Headquarters

Outer ring 44, Ironforge

---

ALIENS, HERE ON AZEROTH! MORE THAN MEETS THE EYE!

Long have we known of life beyond the Stars. But little did we know that Alien life has been here, on Azeroth, long, long before the Orcs first came to this World! Fear not, dear reader, for I bring you proof of this cataclysmic claim!

A Comparison of a Mogu Depiction (Left), and a Draenei Citizen (right). (Photos: Sylfaya Jadescale (left), Brook Johnson (right))

Our search for Truth led us nowhere else but Pandaria, home of Hozen, Pandaren, great brews...and the Mogu. The Mogu, so the Explorers League wants you to think, were once Titan Constructs, but that does seem odd, does it not? How did the Mogu manage to forge one of the largest Empires Azeroth ever saw? How did they build Marvels such as the Great Wall of Pandaria, when even modern Technology could not build Walls this precise? And what for, if the bugs they supposedly want to keep out have wings? The answer is simple, dear reader.

Alien Technology. The Mogu, as we found out, are in fact descendants of Draenei Invaders that came to Azeroth long before the Exodar crashed here! In the name of their Overlord Sargeras, they sought to conquer Azeroth, and enslave us all! They built the great wall with their advanced Alien Technology, not to keep out the mantids, but as part of a large Summoning Circle all around the Townlong Steppes, that never got finished, so they could summon their Overlord! This is the truth the Explorers League does not want you to know, and tries to hide, possibly because they are compromised by the Space Mogu Cult. But let us look at the Evidence for this: Note how Both the Mogu, and Draenei, share a suspiciously similar build, as well as facial tentacles?! Furthermore, one can observe how the "Titan Technology" in Pandaria is decidedly different looking compared to other Titan Installations. But what brought the Draenei to Azeroth again? Are they secretly preparing a second Invasion? Can we look to the Pandaren for our Rescue once more? What is this new City the Draenei are building really? Food for thought, which I must leave you with for now, dear Reader, while I dig deeper into this concerning truth.

Signed, Head Writer of the Kittens Meow,
Brook D. Johnson

---

Advertisement

Shaftscaped

Attention, Dwarves and Earthen! When working on your shaft, you need the right tools for your job, and trust me, your diamonds will thank you. I've actually been using Shaftscaped for months already. I own a couple of their products like The Underminer™ 2.0 and their Diamond polish, because it's the only thing that has saved me from Scratchy Shaft Walls. Shaftscaped was kind enough to send me their Perfect Package 3.0 kit, which includes their new and improved Underminer™ 3.0 along with other liquid formulations for your Shaftscaping routines. Their Underminer™ 3.0 is the only water-resistant digger made with collapse safe™ technology, helping you avoid the absolute suffering that comes from common mining accidents.

Warning. Allied Sanitation Services is a subsidiary of Rustfume Excavation & Co. We operate within the Undermine workers code, and are not responsible for injuries, financial losses or any other impairments occurring.

Contact:

A.S.S. Headquarters

Outer ring 44, Ironforge

---

WHAT SWORD? AN INVESTIGATION, PART 1

Many Stories are told about the Demon Sargeras stabbing the very world at the end of the Legion Invasion. But is that all that is to it?

My travel to Silithus was arduous, and full of perils. Yet, I persisted, and even from afar, I could make out the Silhouette of this menacing Sword.

(Photo: Sylfaya Jadescale)

I made my way along the path, taking in the sights of destroyed Kaldorei Outposts and cracked Earth. It appears the Elements are still in a frenzy around it, as I passed several enraged Elementals that would have no doubt attacked me if they had seen me. Arriving in Silithus was a sight to behold. Once, reportedly infested with Silithid Hives, swarms of them darkening the skies, an eerie silence now seems to be ruling the place. The Earth around the Sword is cracked, and caved in, perhaps as a result of the collapse of the Bug hive structures beneath the sands. Some Outposts seem to have been rebuilt after the destruction, and so I made my way to the nearest, Staghelm point.

During the Fourth War, Silithus was Horde Territory, but now it seems to be neutral ground, as the Cenarion Circle and Earthen Ring hold vigil over the wound.

Alliance Tent at Staghelm Point (Photo: Sylfaya Jadescale)

What else will I find out about the state of Silithus? What threat poses the mysterious demon sword stuck in our World? My Investigations continue in Part 2 next Issue, and thank you for reading

Signed, Field Journalist
Sylfaya Jadescale

---

Advertisement

Six Armed Embrace

"Stuck on Outland, in the hands of a Shivara- Ford Silver expected to be stabbed in his heart- instead, it was stolen..."

Read the gripping new Novel by Frank Steel, a tale of forbidden love, mystery and betrayal. Will Ford Silver return to Azeroth? Or will his forbidden love be his undoing? Find out, and get "Six Armed Embrace" at your nearest Bookstore!

---

The Adventures of Buzz the Robot

---

Kittens Meow

The Shack next to the upper Lake, Stormwind

Brook D.Johnson